

Radlee protects you and your children from online predators.

Predators scroll through social media looking for personal information and signs of vulnerability. As parents, our biggest fear is not knowing whether our child might be the potential target of an online predator. Or worse yet, whether that predator has already made contact.

We know our kids have a thousand followers on social media and may be following a thousand more. How can a parent sift through a hundred thousand photos or comments to know whether there is any suspicious activity, and would they even recognize it if they saw it given the strange emojis and abbreviations and ways that kids communicate online?

The answer is simple: Radlee automatically analyzes millions of data points in posts and connections, finding signs of vulnerability and alerting you to suspicious behavior and bad actors. Radlee gives you the critical information you need, and advice on how to discuss it with your kids.

Predators use technology to harm children. Radlee uses technology to protect children.
